INDEX.

John Gower and his Works, 3; little to be learnt of his family or early life, 5; his high standing at Court—his interview with the King, 7; the two dedications of his Confessio Amantis, 9; difference between him and Chaucer, 11; his death—his will—charitable bequests, 13; his Balades—specimens of them, 15; his Vox Clamantis, 17; the rising under Wat Tyler—its peculiarities, 19; Vox Clamantis, its denunciations of the clergy, 21; final address to the king, 23; progress of the English language in the fourteenth century, 25; Confessio Amantis, its general character, 27; various tales—the Story of Constance, 29; the knight's service to his lady-love, 31; dissertation on mythology—on Lollardie, 33; dissertation on the sciences—conclusion, 35.

The Conflict of Modern Thought, 36; the sense of beauty, 39; poetry and science—theism, 41; progress of society, 43; social progress—whence it must come, 49; the rationale of punishment, 53; the great device of Romanism, 55; identity between human and divine government, 57; religion according to the Sophists, 59; religious development—what comes from war, 61.

Meteoric Stones and Comets, 63; chroniclers and catalogues, 65; the chemist's testimony, 67; aerial artillery and fireballs, 69; how to observe, 71; colours of meteors, 73; star-showers, 75; superstitions and scientific hypothesis, 77; planetary dust, 79; nuclei and tails, 81; the expected comet, 83; the eccentric path of speculation, 85.

De Foe, 85; the development of satire, 87; times of De Foe, 89; state of parties under James II., 91; De Foe and William III., 93; the True-born Englishman—Anne—Swift, 95; De Foe's sufferings, 97; in the pillory—his later works, 99; De Foe—Bunyan—Swift, 101; his genius, 103.

Dr. Livingstone's African Researches, 105; Prester John, 107; the author, 109; his four years' journey, 111; rencontres with the natives, 113; how the women are treated, 115; African rains, 117; insect curiosities, 119; entomological pests—the Tsetse, 121; missionary difficulties, 123; flogging men into Christianity, 125; commerce as the colleague of religion, 127; agricultural capabilities, 129; Africa as a sugar and cotton plantation, 131.

Projected Communications with the East, 133; three principal projects, 135; railway route through Constantinople, 137; views of Stephenson and Sheil, 139; Euphrates valley railway, 141; views of Layard, Rawlinson, and Chesney, 143; the Suez canal, 145; international scientific commission, 147; the anticipated commerce through the Suez canal, 149; will the canal increase our political dangers? 151.

Freytag's Debit and Credit—German Life, 152; Gustav Freytag's antecedents, 153; his training as a dramatic poet, 155; a romance of the counting-house, 157; Anton's young dream, 159; foreshadows of fate, 161; Herr Pix, 163; Americans v. Germans, 165; aristocratic speculations, 167; patrician disaster and plebeian aid, 169; Nemesis, 171.

The Bank Acts and the Credit Crisis of 1857, 172; suspension of the Act of 1844 in 1857, 173; real motives of the suspension, 175; relation of circulation to business, 177; variations in the circulation, 179; a note circulation fluctuating with business, 181; fluctuations not corresponding with business 183; origin of the Act of 1844, 185; the present crisis is not monetary, 187; the crisis flows from an excess of credit, 189; credit tested by produce, 191; difficulties of merchants, 193; end and worst effects of the crisis, 195.

Greyson's Letters—Claims of the Doubter, 196; Professor Rogers and his critics, 197; the scriptural view of unbelief, 199; faith or no faith? 201.

India as it is—India as it may be, 202; delicacy of the subject—interests at stake, 203; constitution of the Company, 205; corrupt patronage, 207; Haileybury—able professors, apt pupils, 209; civil service—categories of employés, 211; outlet afforded by India, 213; endowment in land in lieu of annual idol allowance, 215; East India Company's servants disbursers of payment for idol worship, 217; perfect toleration and religious liberty, 219; putting Christianity under a bushel, 221; Jesuitism of the Brahmins, 223; Mrs. Mackenzie—conduct of East India Company as to idols, 225; missionaries—dissembling Jesuits, 227; Irish Roman Catholic priests, 229; education—crimes—infanticide, 231; Sir John Lawrence, Henry Mead, Lord Canning, 233; Lord Dalhousie's annexations, 235; marching establishment of Lord and Lady Dalhousie, 237; fortresses in Oude, 239; military grievances, 241; Colonel Tucker's suggestions, 243.

Address of the Editor, 245.

EPILOGUE.

246—288.

LITERATURE.

A Year of Revolution, by the Marquis of Normanby, 246.
Captivity of Two Russian Princesses in the Caucasus, 253.
The Boscobel Tracts, 258.
Life of Elizabeth Davis, 258.
Hutton's A Hundred Years Ago, 259.
Murray's Hassan; or, the Child of the Pyramid, 260.
The Exiles of Italy, 263.
Riverston, 263.
The Noble Traytour, 263.
Grant's Ethics of Aristotle, 264.
Thornbury's Art and Nature, 266.
Salad for the Social, 268.
Wayside Fancies, 269.
Spencer's Essays, 269.
French Literature, 269.
Ancien Théâtre Français, 270.
Lettres d'un Mineur en Australie, 270.
Les Voix de Paris, 271.
Apperçu de l'Histoire des Langues Néo-latines, 271.
Fables de Gay, 272.

ART.

Tennyson's Poems, illustrated, 274.

SCIENCE.

Sir B. Brodie's Psychological Inquiries, 277.
Man: his Structure and Physiology, &c., 278.
The Baths of Germany, &c., 280.
The Metropolis of the Water Cure, 280.
Lane's Hydropathy, 281.
The Principles of Agriculture, &c., 281.

THEOLOGY.

Monod's Sermons, 281.
Polens's History of French Calvinism, 283.
Select Library of the Fathers, Part I., 285.
Heppe's History of the Lutheran Formula, 286.
Keil's Commentary on the Books of Kings, 289.
Alexander's Acts of the Apostles, 287.
Hine's Thoughts for the Devout, 287.
Bengel's Gnomon of the New Testament, 287.
The Church and the Age, 288.
Examination into Facts, &c., of Dr. Davidson, 288.

Froude's History of England, 289; general view of the period, 290, 291; England during this period, 293; external form—social condition, 295-297; Mr. Froude's evidence examined, 299; the true idea of feudalism, 301, 302; laws about apparel, diet, and agriculture, 303-306; state of the poorer classes, 307-313; Mr. Froude's idea of the English Constitution, 315; the true idea, 317-319; Mr. Froude's idea of the church, 321-326; England in 1527, 327; question of the divorce, 329-335; England in 1528-9, 337; conclusion, 339.

Gustave Planche and French Fine Art Criticism.—Schools of Boucher and David, 343; Guérin and his influence, 345; Prudhon, Le Brun, and Le Sueur, 347; classical and romantic schools, 349; Gericault—military realism, 351; M. Ingres, 353-355; Carl Vernet—Robert—Gleyre, 357; M. Gustave Planche, 359-361.

Credit-Currency, and Banking.—Connexion of government with the system, 363; principle of the Bank of England, 365; acts for regulating credit-currency, 367; laws of metallic-currency, 369; laws of credit-currency, 371; the laws of credit-currency opposed, 373; the chief reason for opposing them, 375; bank-notes regulated by local wants, 377; impossibility of debasing the standard, 379; advantages of credit, 381.

The Moral Discipline of Children.—Lord Palmerston's dogma, 385; domestic rule must harmonize with social rule, 387; the method of nature, 389; nature's method with adults, 391; bad systems may be relatively good, 393; the normal system illustrated, 395; advantages of the normal system, 397-399; ordinary relation of parent and child, 401; right relation of parent and child, 403; treatment of offences, 405; moral precocity undesirable, 407; coercion should be a last resort, 409; exercise the faculty of self-control, 411; a good system is twice blessed, 413.

Christianity without Judaism.—Intellectual danger of scientific study, 415; religion and science, 417; can science help theology? 419; scientific one-sidedness, 421; the Sabbath, 423; Professor Powell on Protestantism, 425; the 'principle of literalism,' 427; geology versus the decalogue, 429; divine authority of Judaism, 431; fundamental question evaded, 433; Old Testament symbols, 435; unity of Scripture, 437.

Residence above the Clouds—the Peak of Teneriffe.—The Canarian Archipelago, 441; scaling the mountain, 443; mountain loneliness, 445; an atmospheric sahara, 447; fierce radiation of the sun, 449; calorific and actinic rays, 451; lunar heat? 453; goats in the moon? 455; streams of lava, 457; the crater of the Peak, 459; mountain clouds, 461.

Horace Walpole.—His claims to notice—his birth—his family, 463; royal favour—schoolboy days at Eton, 465; he leaves Cambridge—visits France and Italy, 467; parliamentary contests of 1742—keen strife of parties, 469; parliamentary oratory in 1742, 471; disgraceful state of morals and religion, 473; his offer to Conway—death of his father, 475; the way to manage 'royal intractables,' 477; the rebellion of 1745—public feeling, 479; improvements and beautifyings of 'dear Strawberry,' 481; his various occupations—his visitors, 483; his superior taste in art—love of the old masters, 485; his visit to France—gives up his seat in parliament, 487; his 'Historical Doubts'—most of them 'doubts' still, 489; his vindication of his conduct toward Chatterton, 491; approach of old age—his last visit to Paris, 493; his opinion of the literary men of the day, 495; the new friends of his old age, 497; his last farewell to 'dear Strawberry'—his death, 499.

Cowper's 'Analecta Nicæna.'—Rule for literary polemics, 501; Mr. Cowper and the 'Christian Remembrancer,' 503; extent of the Nitrian treasures, 505; Mr. Cowper, M. Renan, and Mr. Cureton, 507; need for the united efforts of all Syriac scholars, 509.

Commerce with India: Past and Present.—Extent of Indian wealth, 511; earliest records of Indian trade, 513; early carrying-trade between Europe and Asia, 515; neglect of trade by the Portuguese, 517; Dutch and English trading monopolies, 519; rise of the Indo-Portuguese empire, 521; first English East India Company, 523; corrupt practices of the first British Company, 525; the second Company, 527; increase of Indian trade since 1815, 529; the Company's claim fell with their trading rights, 531; exports and imports of each Presidency, 533; the future of the Archipelago, 535.

EPILOGUE.

536—568.

LITERATURE.

Taylor's World of Mind, 537.
Atkinson's Siberia, 538.
A Woman's Thoughts about Women, 538.
Martineau (Miss) on the Future of India, 538-9.
Symington on the Beautiful, 539.
Dr. Alexander's Life of Dr. Paterson, 539.
Defence of Lucknow, 540.
Siege of Lucknow, 540.
Sleeman's Journey through Oude, 540.
Breen's Modern English Literature, 541.
Unprotected Females in Norway, 542.
Aboriginal Languages of America, 542.
Madame la Comtesse Dora d'Istria, 542-3.
Bertram Noel, 543.
Collected Works of Dugald Stewart, 543.
Fullarton's Gazetteer of the World, 544-5.
Irving's Commerce with India, 545.
The Sheepfold and the Common, 545.
Fergusson's Penalties of Greatness, 546.
Heirs of the Homestead, 546.
Kennedy on the Indian Mutiny, 547.
Stoughton on Tyndale, Hooper, and Whitfield, 549.
Phillippo's United States and Cuba, 550.
Ludlow's British India, 551.
French Literature, 551-2.

ART.

Art Exhibitions, 552-3.
Ruskin on the Political Economy of Art, 553-6.

SCIENCE.

Gosse's Omphalos, 557-561.
Baird's Cyclopedia of the Natural Sciences, 561.
Lewes's Sea-side Studies.
The Congregational Psalmist, 561.

THEOLOGY.

The Philosophy of Theism, 562.
The Israel of the Alps, 562-4.
Fleming's Moral Government, 564.
Life of J. W. Winslow, 565.
English Hearts and English Hands, 566.
Muscutt's Altar Sins, 567.
Doctrine of the Greek Church, 567.
Decision Exemplified, 568.
Athenagoræ Philosophi Atheniensis Opera, 568.

Savill & Edwards, Printers, Chandos Street, Covent Garden.